London, 12-25 July, 1914. Received telegram of 11-24 July. Grev has instructed the ambassador of England at Vienns to support our demarche concerning the extension of, the delay of the ultimatum. He told me at the same time that the Austrian sador bad come to see him and had explained that the character of an ultimatum must not be attributed to the Austrian note—it must be considered as a demarche which, in the case of absence of reply or in case of insufficient reply within the term fixed would have as a consequence the rup-ture of diplomatic relations and the immediate departure from Belgrade of the minister of Austria-Hungary, without carrying in its train, however, the immediate commencement of hostilities. Grey added that in consequence of this explanation he had instructed the ambassador of England at Vienna that in case it should be too late to raise the question of the extension of the delay of the ultimatum, that of the stay (arrest) of hostilities might perhaps serve as a base of discussion. The ambassador answered that that was not possible, in view of the resolution taken not to interfere in the Austro-Servian conflict. Thereupon the minister asked if the four clared to Russia that she does not Powers-England, Germany, Italy, and France-were not able to take steps at St. Petersburg and Vienna, since the affair reduced itself in essentials to a conflict between Russia and Austria. Paris, 14-27 July, 1914.

Have conferred with the Gerant of the ministry of foreign affairs, in presence of Berthelot, immediately after my return to Paris. Both confirmed to me the details concerning the steps (demarches) taken by the ambassador of Germany, which Sevastopoule com-municated to you in his telegrams. This morning Baron de Schoen confirmed in writing his deciaration of yesterday, namely: (1) Austria has deseek acquisitions and does not attack the integrity of Servia. Her only object is to insure her own tranquility; (2) Consequently, it depends upon Russia whether war is averted. (3) Germany and France, completely unit-ed in the ardent desire not to break the peace, must influence Russia in the direction of moderation. Baron de Schoen laid special stress on the expression of the united view (la solidarite) of Germany and France. It is the strong conviction of the minister de la justice that the aforesaid demarches of Germany have for their obvicus object to disunite (desunir). Russian and France, to draw the French government into the representations made at St. Petersburg, and thus to compromise our ally in our eyes; finally, in case of war, to throw the responsibility, not on Germany, which soi-disant is employing all her efforts to maintain peace, but on Russia and France
